2003 Yearbook

A year in stamps unique 20th Edition

A fitting end to 2003

Christmas

As with last year's Christmas issue, the wonder of nature is captured in these startling images of ice and snow.

Christmas 2003

The fully illustrated pack features examples of Andy Goldsworthy's fascinating natural sculptures together with his own commentary.

The stamps were designed by Dick Davis. The ice and snow sculptures were created by artist Andy Goldsworthy, who works in the open air using materials found in the natural landscape. An important aspect of his work is the changing nature of his creations which he captures through photography.

2nd Class - Ice Spiral

This snake-like icicle was made from reconstructed icicles wrapped round a tree at the Glen Marlin Falls in Goldworthy's home county of Dumfriesshire.

1st Class -Icicle Star

The multipointed star was created by dipping the thick ends of icicles in snow then water and holding them until they froze together.

E Class - Wall of Frozen Snow

The glowing globes were created by carving the snow to varying thickness to allow the sun to shine through. This project was carried out in Izumi-Mura in Japan.

53p - Ice Ball

Scaur Water in Dumfriesshire was the location for this sculpture. Ice was taken from frozen pools, broken into pieces and then welded together with water from dripping ice.

68p - Ice Hole

This was created in Capenhoch,

Dumfriesshire by filling the arch of a branch with snow and making a hole which changed with the light.

£1.12 - Snow Pyramids

Standing eerily inside the Arctic

Circle are the four pyramids or spires, which were moulded from snow at Grise Fjord, Ellesmere Island.
